Curds and Whey?

Part A: Remember the nursery rhyme about Little Miss Muffet eating her curds and whey? You might be surprised to learn that curds and whey is a dish similar to cottage cheese! The separation of milk solids (curds) and liquids (whey) is the first step in making all kinds of cheese. And the process begins with milk.

Try this experiment to observe the separation of curds and whey (but don't eat the results!):

Materials Needed

- Whole milk
- Apple cider vinegar
- Small clear glass bowl
- Paper coffee filter
- Jar wide enough for filter to fit inside the top of it to make a small "basket," with the filter overlapping the edges of the jar
- Rubber band to secure the outside edges of the filter around the jar
- Small mixing spoon
- Measuring spoons

Directions

1. Measure  $\frac{1}{4}$  cup milk into clear glass bowl.
2. Measure 2 tablespoons of vinegar and add to milk. Stir with spoon.
3. Place coffee filter inside top of jar and secure in place with rubber band.
4. Pour milk and vinegar mixture into the filter and allow liquid to fully strain.

On the back of this sheet, record your observations after steps #2 and #4 and include sketches of what you saw.

Part B: Cheese makes a tasty meal ingredient, and there are several varieties from which you can choose. Try unscrambling the names of these favorites:

Milk and milk products like cheese are important (and delicious!) sources of calcium and protein for your growing child. ADADC farmers provide the milk used to produce many cheese varieties found in your supermarket. MyPlate guidelines recommend  $2\frac{1}{2}$  cups of dairy (five 8-ounce servings) for children ages 4-8 each day and  $1\frac{1}{2}$  cups (three 8-ounce servings) for ages 9 and up.
