Made possible by Peapod, the country's leading online grocer, this free educational outreach program gives 4th and 5th grade students in the Washington DC metropolitan area the chance to send $250 worth of fresh, wholesome food to a local food bank. The program is broken into three easy steps, which Peapod will walk you through along the way:

Step 1: You will be provided with access to a virtual, interactive presentation from Peapod that introduces the issue of hunger, reviews key nutritional label information, and shows students how to make healthy food choices by referring to the USDA MyPlate dietary guidelines. It also explains how Peapod.com can be used to select nutritious grocery items while saving shoppers time and money.

Step 2: Once you complete the presentation, Peapod will provide a $250 gift card code that students will use to order food from Peapod.com. Your students will work in-classroom to develop a grocery list using the nutrition and budget lessons they have learned and the tools available on Peapod.com. We ask that grocery deliveries take place within one month of program launch.

Step 3: Upon order completion, a Peapod delivery driver will meet your class at your local food bank to hand-deliver the groceries alongside your students, which provides a great service learning opportunity.

Presentations are now available for the 2015 fall semester. Only a limited number of classrooms will be selected to participate in this program.
